Please Don't Eat the Daisies

"There is no real me," Joan Nash (Patricia Crowley) tells her husband Jim (Mark Miller). "I'm an ever-changing mosaic." Unfortunately, the same cannot be said for this show, which in the weeks we've seen it is less an ever-changing mosaic than it is a never-changing museum piece. Furthermore, it is a museum piece which, although irritatingly "modern," also has a waxworks chamber-of-horrors quality to it, part of which is caused by a house that would give pause to the Addams Family, but which is more due, we suspect, to the most cloyingly coy family this side of your least favorite commercial.

First of all there is Mrs. Nash herself, who is unfortunately written and even more unfortunately played as her own favorite character. Second, there is her stumble-bumble husband, who is so professionally professorish that the best we can say for him is he deserves her. And, finally, not one, not two, not even three, but, for heaven's sake, four freckled-faced small-fry boys, each one of whom is more precociously Huckleberry Fink than the next one—except for two of them, who are about equal, not because of any special virtue but because they are twins. Based on Jean Kerr's book of the same title, the idea was a good one for one magazine article perhaps. But for expansion into first a book, then a film and now a television series, it's not only a bit much, it's much much. The result is less a show which holds the mirror up to nature than it is one which holds nature up to the mirror. The Nashes are such an all-fired, all-around, all-American TV family that they shouldn't be on television at all—they should be watching it.

This is one show where the plot almost always is a plot—in other words, a plot to get Dad to do something or Mom to do something or, as in one recent show, to get both Mom and Dad to be able to tell their own twins apart. Honestly, that was it. The twins, for heaven's sake! We can't even tell the episodes apart. Anyway, around the ever-present father-and-mother jokes (i.e., when one of the boys flushes Mrs. Nash's sponge down the toilet, Mrs. Nash says, "Not my brand-new $10 Greek sponge with the built-in cream soap and the oil of roses?") cavort a host of little-boy jokes (i.e., "Mommy, what's sex?" "Well, son, when a man and woman fall in love, they get married, and when they get married they live together and sometimes . . . Why do you ask?" "Because I'm sending in for a ping-pong set and it says 'Name,' 'Address,' 'Age' and 'Sex'").

Very funny, we admit—if, say, you are between five and six years old and you haven't heard it before. All in all, the best dialog in the show is supplied by Ladadog (Lord Nelson), who barks very well. Even he, however, overacts.

TV TELETYPE*: HOLLYWOOD: JOSEPH FINNIGAN REPORTS:

LEE J. COBB's schedule of appearances on The Virginian has been trimmed. He'll be in only eight episodes this year . . . In the "Horse Fighter" segment of that series, former rodeo-champion CASEY TIBBS plays the role of a bronco rider . . . ANDY GRIFFITH's television son RONNY HOWARD pays a short visit to The Big Valley while his own show is on vacation . . . BARRY SULLIVAN is a killer during a Long, Hot Summer spell later this fall . . . CHRIS JONES (Jesse James) has revealed his real-life marriage to actress SUSAN STRASBERG.

Bushy-haired STERLING HOLLOWAY, formerly of The Baileys of Balboa, is in the comedy pilot Plotkin Prison, We Love You. He plays a convict who is henpecked by his wife on visiting day . . . JILL ST. Golden gift of babyhood

Sometimes new mothers concentrate so hard on the technicalities of baby care they forget to enjoy their babies. Your delight in your baby is one of the great golden gifts you can give. The baby who is talked to (and laughed with) lovingly, develops security and sociability. The baby who is played with happily, gains confidence early and learns invaluable lessons in co-operation.

Vitamin C availability. I know you mothers everywhere usually think in terms of orange juice for baby's vitamin C. But it should be reassuring to know that Gerber Strained Apple Juice and juice combinations are enriched to the same high level of vitamin C found in Gerber Orange Juice. Your choice of 10 varieties in all, including the new Orange-Apple-Banana Juice. All are delightfully delicate in flavor and carefully pasteurized for baby's protection.

Golden rules for baby care. By-the-book rules are fine as guides but all rules do not fit all babies and any rule is only as good as its flexibility. Guides to good mothering: heed your doctor, trust your mother instinct and lead with your heart. Happy is the baby whose mother makes adjustments for his (or her) individuality.

Dandy dinner plan. Gerber Chicken Noodle Dinner, side-dished with Gerber Green Beans and topped off with Gerber Fruit Dessert. P.S. Strained or junior versions.

as we see it

■ All the networks found some joy in the first national Nielsen ratings of the season. ABC's new shows averaged higher audiences than the other networks' new shows. CBS placed eight programs in the top 15. NBC had the highest over-all rating.

It's nice to see a race where all three contestants wind up winning something or other.

■ Still, all is not smiles and happy talk. Glancing down the list of shows to the deep shadows of the bottom 15, we find ABC with more losers, seven, than the other networks but—and this is some consolation—with no new shows among them. Of CBS's five shows in the bottom 15, two were new—Trials of O'Brien and Steve Lawrence. NBC had only three bringing up the rear, but they were all new entries—Convoy, Hank and Camp Runamuck.

It's sad to see a race where all three contestants wind up losing something or other.

■ We've named five of the bottom 15. The others are, in order of unpopularity, CBS Reports, Shindig I and II, Slattery's People, Donna Reed, Ozzie and Harriet, King Family, Jimmy Dean, Amos Burke and Rawhide.

We undoubtedly will see some fancy shuffling of programs at each network. At this writing Slattery's People and Shindig already have been canceled, but CBS is bound to try to save Trials of O'Brien and, perhaps, Steve Lawrence, by moving them to other time periods. NBC could place Convoy in a better strategic position, and ABC has several it might try to save.

■ This much is certain. Unless it's a pet public-service project, a show in the bottom 15 is in trouble.

Viewers who want these shows to stay on the air should write letters, get friends to watch, and generally make some noise. Now.

WHEN THE WISE GUYS WERE WRONG

Jackie Cooper's $1,500,000 gamble is paying off and the ex-child star is becoming a TV giant

FIRST OF TWO PARTS BY ROBERT DE ROOS

When Jackie Cooper was named head of Screen Gems' West Coast studios, the television arm of Columbia Pictures, there were some raised eyebrows and some smirks in Hollywood. The wise guys smiled wisely and said, "Oho, Skippy'll look pretty for the press and a lot of guys named Moe will do all the work."

As is often the case, the wise guys were wrong.

Jackie Cooper, the 43-year-old former child actor, can point to one of the best records in the business. In his first year, Screen Gems made 10 pilots and sold six series—a batting average of .600. The usual average is one sale for every six or seven pilots.

Jackie is pleased but declines full credit. "You can't do anything alone," he says. "I've had a lot of the very best help. And remember, I just recommend the scripts I think should be shot. The decision to spend the money is made in New York by Jerry Hyams, head of Screen Gems."

The six new series are The Wackiest Ship in the Army, Gidget, I Dream of Jeannie, Camp Runamuck and two daytime serials, Morning Star and Days of Our Lives. (Days, with Macdonald Carey, debuts Nov. 8.) Four Screen Gems classics also have been renewed: The Farmer's Daughter, Hazel, The Donna Reed Show and Bewitched.

Only a couple of clouds marred Cooper's first year as an incipient tycoon: a book—"Only You, Dick Daring! or How to Write One Television Script and Make $50,000,000"—and an unhappy actor.

In the book, author Merle Miller details the long struggle to get a series called Calhoun, starring Cooper, onto the tube, an effort which went down in flames. The book came out a few months after Jack's elevation to studio head.

"Dick Daring" makes it clear that Cooper is a man at home with the fancy dealing of high-level TV production and a man with his eye firmly on the main chance. Jackie has survived in the brutal world of motion pictures and TV for more years than almost any other actor, and he did not survive by being a patsy.

"I read only what was published in TV GUIDE," Cooper says. (But of course he read the book—how could he not? That is clear because Jackie comments on subjects not included in the TV GUIDE excerpts.)

"Two things bothered me," Jack says. "The whack Miller took at Jim Aubrey—then at CBS—and the whack he took at Stuart Rosenberg, the director of the Calhoun pilot. Stuart is a sensitive and talented man and he tried extremely hard to save Miller's script.

"Another thing: The book has me saying 'God bless you' all the time. I've never said it in my life.

"There are many, many inaccuracies in the book but I think Miller put them into the story as entertainment. It ranks as one of his best works of fiction."

At the annual dinner of the Writers Guild of America, one sketch was based on "Dick Daring," and Cooper was the butt of the joke. To everyone's surprise, Jackie played the "goat" role. When he faced the audience for the first time, he was cheered for five minutes. "He made more friends that night than he'll ever make as an executive," a friend said.

As Miller reported accurately, Jackie sprinkles "I love you" and "old buddy" liberally in his conversation—which, incidentally, comes out deep and loud. But being an executive is not all love and kisses. There was the matter of his other cloud, the unhappy actor. "I was prepared to blow two-and-a-half million dollars—in fact I did blow it—rather than have a star dictate to a producer," Jack says. "I don't think any other company would have done it—but I did. It was a question of the star's disagreeing with the concept of the series after we'd sold it. I said we were going with the original contract and would get someone else for the role.

"I called Jerry Hyams and he backed me 1000 percent. That means we had to go to the network and the sponsors and say we couldn't deliver what we had sold them. They could have called off the two-and-a-half-million-dollar deal.

dictate—that would be the tail wagging the dog. The star came around to our way of thinking, but we aren't exactly on a buddy-buddy basis."

He added, however: "An actor needs attention and an actor needs love beyond the call of a contract—that goes for any creative person. They have to have more than a check going to their business agents and a chance to read a financial report at the end of the month. In the theater, they get it from the audience, but they don't get applause—any emotional reward—in this business."

As head of studio Jackie ("They'll be calling me Jackie when I'm 70") persuaded a formidable list of experienced writer-producers to hook on with Screen Gems. "Jackie started a crash program," says a writer. "He knew that to get a product, he had to get people who had shown the ability to produce that product. That can be expensive and it was—Jackie would have looked anything but clever if his gamble had not paid off."

Cooper says, "When you have first-rate talent, it's a good gamble."

It turned out well. Screen Gems invested $1,500,000 to develop the pilots. The six new shows will return a gross of more than $7,500,000 for the first 26 weeks of the season.

"Our first obligation is to sell our shows and keep them on the air," Jackie says. "This is a tough business. You can have an opening with eight or 10 million people watching and still have a failure."

"As a small producer I was putting after-tax dollars into my deals. A failure can kill you under those circumstances. Here I'm doing what I like best with a lot of help, and a failure here or there isn't going to break me. Nobody bats 1000."

In a studio office there is a hand-lettered sign: "COULD a committee have written HAMLET?" The expected answer is "No." "There is no committee creating in my studio," Jack says. "I give the creative people a time and a place to work and let them the hell alone."

Actually, Jack does not leave his producers alone. He wanders around the studio and has frequent sessions with the creative staff.

"Jackie is stubborn, but he's not willful," a writer said. "He's no easy mark, but he's not impossible either. If he believes in a thing, he'll fight for you."

All the writer-producers work for Cooper but are in competition among themselves, fighting for a pilot to be made. "I make the decision on what shows go to film," Cooper says. "You can't blame those guys for resenting a 'no' decision."

When Bill Dozier resigned as head of Screen Gems prior to Jackie's elevation, gossip had it that he left after a power struggle: Dozier wanted to run the studio his way and his superiors wanted and kept firm control in New York. Hollywood said Jackie was chosen because he would go along.

"I chose Cooper because he is a young man who had a background of an actor and who speaks actors' language," says Jerry Hyams. "He has been a director and a producer and he has a wonderful reputation as an honorable and upstanding young man. That was important."

Cooper goes to New York "20 to 24 times a year" but rarely stays over two days. "I talk to the boys in New York a lot," he says. "I enjoy talking to them. They are older, more experienced men. After all, all they can do is fire me—and have to pay me for a long, long time."

NEXT WEEK: Child stars are supposed to wind up broke and emotionally shaken. Not Jackie Cooper.

At Kennedy Airport, Dina alights from plane she chartered from East Hampton.

A COMMUTER

Comfortably settled in jet airplane, she awaits take-off for Hollywood.

Complaining commuters of the world: Consider actress Dina Merrill. She commutes regularly (at least once a month) between New York and Los Angeles and—nary a complaint.

That's because she has the operation down pat. Here she's arriving at Kennedy Airport one rainy Sunday afternoon last summer after a charter flight from East Hampton, Long Island (her summer home). She boarded a jet, arrived in Los Angeles six hours later (about dinner time), drove a rented car into town (she had telegraphed ahead for one from East Hampton), had a good night's sleep and showed up at the studio at 7 the next morning all bright-eyed and sparkly for the filming of "The Monster," premiere episode of The FBI.

She has even reduced the problem of picking up her luggage: Her bags are striped in white so she can find them quickly in the baggage depot.

Why not move out to Hollywood and avoid the traveling? No need to, she says. "Commuting across the country is easy—speedy and convenient."

CATCHES THE 4 PM ...to Hollywood

Safely arrived, she talks things over on set with Efrem Zimbalist Jr., FBI star.

The name is Collins, and he was picked off a construction job for 'Wackiest Ship in the Army'

In the beginning, there was Gary Cooper. Since the advent of television, there have been Gary Conway, Gary Vinson and Gary Lockwood. And now there is Gary Collins.

And who, pray tell, is he?

A good question. Not since TV's early Warner Brothers-Beach Boy-Troy Donahue era has a star come so completely and suddenly from left field, not to mention a steel construction job, to star in a series. Gary Collins was on such a job in Las Vegas when he got the word on The Wackiest Ship in the Army.

Collins had done some acting before he met agent Jimmy McHugh Jr., the man who landed the role for him, but most of it had been in Europe while he was in the Army and later, unimportantly, in motion pictures and stage productions there. McHugh, who claims "an instinctive and intuitive nose for commercial talent," told Collins that he would take him on if he would agree to do nothing in movies or TV for a year, by which time he thought he could get him a lead in a series. That is why the actor happened to be hustling steel beams in Las Vegas. He had gone there to try to get a job as an emcee or singer, but nothing was available and, with a wife to support and a baby on the way, he decided to take what he could get. Exactly nine months after his agreement with McHugh, he was signed for The Wackiest Ship in the Army.

If it were not for his strong masculine image and a nose which has a tendency to wander about his face, it would be easy to fit Gary Collins into the beach-boy pattern. He was born Gary Collins, believe it or not, 26 years ago in Venice, Cal., which is on the beach, and before he went into the Army in 1958, he spent six months wandering the Pacific beaches from Oregon to Mexico, sleeping outdoors and buying food with the deposit money he got for bottles he found in the sand.

Gary's parents were divorced when he was a baby. Collins says, "I never even saw my father until I was 20 years old." His mother raised him and his sister by working as a waitress and in factories throughout California and Nevada. The family moved from Los Angeles to Fresno to Sacramento to Reno to Carson City to Las Vegas and finally back to Los Angeles again. Gary went to school in most of these places but finished at Santa Monica City College, where he majored in accounting and never even thought about being an actor.

His mother tends to discount her role in raising the children. "There are other families that do that, too," she says. "I never attached any importance to it." But Gary speaks gratefully of her and was particularly proud when she came to Holland in 1963 to see him in a British musical revue called "Say Cheese."

By that time he had been in Europe more than five years. He began acting in the Army, in "Stalag 17" at Fort Smith, Ark., and in musicals like "Oklahoma!" and "Once upon a Mattress" in Germany. After his Army service, he hitchhiked around Europe, sight-seeing and getting small acting jobs where he could. In Paris, when he dubbed English dialog to French films, he finally decided, "I'm never going to make it here," and headed home.

In New York, he was hired to understudy the lead in the first play he auditioned for, Tennessee Williams' "The Milk Train Doesn't Stop Here Anymore." He also played his first television role, in the daytime serial, The Doctors. When "The Milk Train" stopped, he did a season at the Barter Theatre in Virginia, after which he returned to Europe to do an Edward Albee play, "The Death of Bessie Smith" and an art film, "Stranded," which was shown at the Cannes Film Festival. Then he went back to California.

Almost the first thing he did was marry Susan Peterson, his high school sweetheart, whom he had not even written to during the years he was in Europe. They now have a 10-month old son Guy William, and another baby due soon. The Collins family has recently moved into a rented two-bedroom home in Brentwood, one of Los Angeles' nicer suburbs. Gary still drives the secondhand Rambler he bought when he got back to town, but he gave in to the blandishments of his wife and had an interior decorator furnish the house. There, however, he ran into a problem familiar to actors over the years but probably most pressing to unknown actors starring in new television shows. The decorator told him, "You're an actor—I can't get any credit on you."

That seems to be his only problem—so far. His co-star, Jack Warden, says, "He's lovely to work with." His agent, Jimmy McHugh Jr., says, "He is still—thank goodness—kind of naive. He's uncomplicated. It's refreshing." But then he adds, "The one thing we're always concerned about is whether they stay on the tracks. One always hopes they don't get off the tracks." As for Gary Collins himself, when someone who has been around Hollywood a long time said, "A year from now you'll probably be impossible," he replied, "I hope so."

THE WHITE HOUSE IS THEIR BEAT

Our man covers the men who cover the President

By Neil Hickey

"Attention the press. The 11 o'clock briefing will commence immediately in Mr. Moyers' office." Thirty reporters unwind hurriedly from green leather sofas in the West Wing lobby of the White House and file toward the inner offices where toil the men closest to the President of the United States.

Bill D. Moyers, the President's press secretary—incredibly youthful looking (he is, in fact, 31), blue-suited, and slim—stands behind his desk smoking an oversize cigar and drinking coffee from a paper cup. The reporters crowd about him, their pads and pencils ready.

It is a day in late summer, 1965. Moyers glances about the large office, then reads from a sheaf of papers: "I have a number of announcements. The President has appointed David C. Acheson to the post of special assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury..."

Standing among the reporters, taking notes rapidly, are the three men who follow the President for the ma-major television networks: ABC's Bill Lawrence—a great, rumpled man with a froggy voice; NBC's Ray Scherer—lanky, Lincoln-esque; CBS's Harry Reasoner—white-haired, wry, with a hint of a suppressed smile.

“Covering the White House really consists of living another man's life. We go where he goes. We can never plan a weekend with our families with any confidence. If he leaves unexpectedly for the ranch in Texas on a Friday afternoon, we pack up and follow him,” says Ray Scherer. “It's a long day: 9 A.M. to about 7 P.M., and that doesn't leave much time for socializing. The correspondents sometimes see each other after hours, but mostly at official functions. If something breaks at the White House, I have to hurry back here.”

“LBJ dominates Washington more than any President in my time. And he sets great store by television news. There was a time when television reporters were interlopers at the White House. Now we have everything our own way.”

A correspondent hits Moyers with a question about a quotation attributed to Henry Cabot Lodge in The New York Times to the effect that the U.S. would remain in Vietnam even if the South Vietnamese asked us to get out. Does this, the reporter wants to know, indicate a major shift in U.S. policy in that area?

Moyers is ready. He strikes down the report as being third-hand and made without reference to context. “We have no evidence that such a statement was made,” he says. The room erupts with questions, a half-dozen reporters talking at once. Moyers fields them all swiftly and unfalteringly. His composure is massive; he says no less than he intends to and will not be goaded into saying more. Whether Lodge was imprudent or The Times in error remains moot.

The briefing ends 20 minutes after it began, and the reporters file out to the West Wing lobby, and thence to the press room.

Many of the reporters are still on the telephone to their news desks when a voice on the loud-speaker says: “Press to the Rose Garden.”

At 11:30 A.M. the President emerges from his office and walks with his rolling gait to a lectern set up on the steps leading down to the Rose Garden. His business of the moment is to applaud the passage of a $185,000,000 bill for research on the desalting of sea water, and to conduct a ceremonial signing of the bill in the presence of a score of dignitaries recruited to attend.

Ray Scherer stands in the 95-degree sunlight, holding pad, pencil, and a stop watch. Ten years earlier, on Sept. 24, 1955, his circumstances were different: He was the only network correspondent at Lowry Field, near Denver, when President Eisenhower suffered a heart attack. Scherer commandeered the nearest phone and stayed on it for most of the next 12 hours, feeding the Nation, via NBC's TV and radio networks, reports on the President's illness.

From Fort Wayne, Ind., to the White House Rose Garden, Scherer had traveled a far piece—a quarter of a million miles, to be exact, which is how far four Presidents have led him. For 12 years he covered the White House for NBC, then shifted to Capitol Hill in 1964. After President Johnson tapped NBC's then White House man, John Chancellor, to head the Voice of America, Scherer agreed to return to his old beat.

The President ends his remarks and descends to an oversize desk for the ceremonial signing, using dozens of pens for the task. Then he hands them out to the guests and dignitaries. A few pens remain in the President's hand and he gives them to photographers and correspondents saying: “Keep these for your grandchildren.”

like a Halloween ratchet. "Anything going on in American Government has a White House angle, so my beat is unlimited. In the late 1930's, when I first came to the White House, there were no foreign visitors to speak of because the U.S. wasn't the world leader it is today. Then came Lend-Lease, the Atlantic Charter, the war itself, the UN, NATO, SEATO, the Alliance for Progress. The value and quality of news coming out of the White House increased a thousandfold.

"LBJ has a horror of somebody printing something—a Cabinet appointment, for example—before he's ready to announce it. Still, he remains amazingly available. We see a lot more of him in the course of a day than any of his predecessors."

The President arrives

At 1 P.M., reporters lounge in the West Wing lobby, chatting, reading newspapers, waiting. The President is scheduled in a few moments to meet in the Fish Room with a group of governors to discuss the severe drought afflicting the Northeast. The loud-speaker in the lobby sounds, and the correspondents are on their feet again and heading for the Fish Room. The President outlines his plans of assistance to Governors Scranton of Pennsylvania, Rockefeller of New York, Hughes of New Jersey, and Terry of Delaware.

In a corner, Bill Lawrence scribbles on a pad. Since 1932, when he joined his hometown paper, the Lincoln (Neb.) Star, he'd served with Associated Press, United Press, and The New York Times—the latter for a 20 year stretch during which he covered Moscow, the Pacific War, the United Nations, Poland, Germany, Latin America, the Balkans and Korea, as well as politics at home. Then, he quit The Times in 1961 to join ABC.

Last April, he won the George Foster Peabody Broadcasting Award for his work during the election year, an acclamation the more remarkable since Lawrence has had to work hard to shift gears from newspaper writing to the terser demands of television.

At 1:30, the reporters leave the Fish Room, still writing in their pads, again head for the Rose Garden, where the President is scheduled to make a statement on his See America First campaign urging Americans to spend their vacation dollars in the U.S. instead of Europe.

In the Rose Garden, the temperature still stands in the 90's. TV film cameramen, photographers, correspondents, and dignitaries mop their foreheads and wait. Then the President emerges from his office with Mrs. Johnson and commences his remarks about seeing America first. Our scenery is better than their scenery, he says, in effect. Then, after Mrs. Johnson speaks briefly, he heads back to his office.

A correspondent arrives hurriedly in the garden, sees the President departing, and says to a cameraman: "I missed it! What did he say?"

"He said, 'See the U.S.A. in your Chevrolet,'" replies the cameraman. "Then he went 'Mwah!' just like Dinah Shore."

'Like a police beat'

Harry Reasoner says, "It's like a police beat, except on a very high level. You work between the 'lids' and you relax only when the 'lid' is on: those periods during which the press secretary assures you there will be no announcements or ceremonies. The opportunity of beating the opposition on a story is minimal.

"There's a lot of time wasted while covering the White House. Long periods go by when nothing happens. But it's important to be here even when things seem dull. There's continued a clubby feeling among the correspondents."

It's 3:45, all quiet in the West Wing lobby except for the low snore of a correspondent slouched in a leather sofa. By 4, the lobby is crowded with reporters once again, and when a voice on the loud-speaker says, "Press to Mr. Moyers' office," they all get up and hurry away.

Moyers has a fresh cigar and a hot container of coffee. "Tomorrow at noon," he begins, "Henry Cabot Lodge will be sworn in as Ambassador to Saigon. The Senate, by a vote of 57 to 33, has passed the bill authorizing a Department of Housing and Urban Development." He reads a statement by the President applauding the Senate's action.

"Tomorrow at 11:30," Moyers continues, "the President will sign a bill authorizing purchase of 200 acres of land in West Branch, Iowa, as the Hoover Memorial site." The birthplace of former President Hoover is being established as a national monument, he explains; he reads a long list of Republican congressmen, senators, ex-Presidents, and Presidential candidates whom the President has invited to attend the signing in the Rose Garden on the following day.

"Sounds like the last roundup," says a reporter at the rear of the room, and he is rewarded with a burst of laughter from his colleagues and from Moyers.

'Repeat the name, please'

Harry Reasoner, standing in the crowded room, asks that a name be repeated. As the junior network man at the White House (he's been there only since last Feb. 15) he is still feeling his way along. But the Reasoner Touch is well known: a facile blend of irony and lucidity in his reporting, a talent for composing the broadcast essay on piquant side lines to the news.

Reasoner left Dakota City, Iowa, for college at Stanford and the University of Minnesota, then served on the now-defunct Minneapolis Times. He even wrote a novel in 1946 called "Tell Me About Women." (Somebody did, apparently; he now has seven children.) He spent three years in Manila with the U.S. Information Agency, and joined CBS in 1956.

The briefing ends—the last major bit of business of the day—and the correspondents shuffle back to the press room to telephone their news desks.

Network editors go to work

The three network editors in their studios scattered around Washington are by now sifting reports from all their Washington correspondents—Defense Department, State Department, the Pentagon, Capitol Hill, as well as the White House—to determine which aspects of the Washington news are potential stories for Huntley-Brinkley, Walter Cronkite and Peter Jennings. If, in the opinion of the news editor, a story originating at the White House needs special comment by the correspondent, that man will hasten to the studio by taxi, write his commentary, and tape it for the evening news. This day, however, the editors conclude that the films of the President taken during the day will stand on their own, with brief remarks by the anchor men.

Thus the body of the day's work is done. All the correspondents begin drifting down the curving driveway to the White House's northwest gate. The network men leave singly: a trio of grass-roots newsmen if ever there was one—Fort Wayne, Ind.; Lincoln, Neb.; Dakota City, Iowa—who have come by divergent routes to this mansion on Pennsylvania Avenue to report on what the President of the United States is up to.

FOR THE RECORD

Northern California Edition

Movie Mutilation: The practice of cutting movies to fit the special needs of television—to insert commercials, or to fit limited time periods, for example—may have to stop. The directors who make the movies would rather do the job themselves, and several have risen in court to retain that privilege.

Latest to do so is George Stevens, whose "A Place in the Sun" is scheduled for NBC this winter. Stevens sued NBC and Paramount pictures for $2 million last week in Los Angeles Superior Court to forestall "mutilation and dismemberment" of his picture, which stars Elizabeth Taylor in a version of Theodore Dreiser's "An American Tragedy." Stevens contends his right to "edit, cut and score" the film, given him in his original contract, still is in effect, and any cutting by the network would be a violation of this right. What he might agree to, Stevens said, would be the showing of the complete film in three acts, with commercials being inserted between the acts.

Two other directors have raised similar objections in court. An injunction was denied Otto Preminger when he sought to prevent TV showing of his "Anatomy of a Murder" until the right to prevent cuts was resolved. The issue has yet to be settled in court. And Billy Wilder has court action pending on whether CBS has the right to cut his "The Apartment," scheduled for next season.

"Good Bet": As it must, apparently, to most excoes of NBC's The Tonight Show, the time is approaching for Johnny Carson to move up to better things. Johnny made it known last week that he would like to quit Tonight and take over a prime-time show of his own—as Steve Allen and Jack Paar did before him. "It's a good bet," said an executive in the Carson organization, "that Johnny will be off The Tonight Show a year from today. He would like to do a free-swinging, once-a-week variety show, and he probably will be doing one by the 1966 season."

But NBC's head of programming, Mort Werner, wasn't going quite that far. "We've been exploring all sorts of possibilities," Werner said. "Remember, Carson's contract for The Tonight Show has almost two more years to run."

The betting? If not next season, the following season for sure. Carson wants off the five-a-week treadmill.

Dancing Girl: Most stars, when their series begin to slip, can't do much but sit sadly and watch them slide. Not Juliet Prowse. She can dance. In an effort to halt the downward trend in the ratings of her new series, Mona McCluskey, Juliet will be dancing more in some episodes. It's all part of a change in the Mona McCluskey character to help the show, according to producer George Burns. Miss Prowse's comment: "There's always room for improvement. . . . You've got to get out and move a little bit."

AFTER MOVIES WHAT?

Gee, wouldn't it be a shame if, in a few years, these nine out of 10 worthless movies ["The Day the Movies Run Out," Oct. 23] might be replaced with old series like The Defenders, Slattery's People, Mr. Novak, Breaking Point, etc.?

9:00 3 4 8 MOVIE—Drama

In this adaptation of Joseph Hayes' Broadway hit, Humphrey Bogart portrayed a heavy, the type of role that brought him fame in the early Thirties.

After escaping from the Terre Haute Federal Prison, gangster Glenn Griffin leads his younger brother Hal and sadistic Sam Kobish to an Indianapolis suburb, where the trio invade the home of Dan Hilliard. Griffin, who plans to use the Hilliard residence in his plot to kill Deputy Sheriff Jesse Bard, tells his hostages to "keep everything normal."

Bogart, who died in 1957, is "taking on the aspects and quality of an authentic figure in American folklore," according to Richard Gehman, Bogey's biographer. Revivals of his films continue to draw full houses. William Wyler directed the 1955 film.

'THE PRIDE OF THE YANKEES'

Gary Cooper and Walter Brennan

This 1942 film biography of Lou Gehrig, "Iron Horse" of the New York Yankees during the "Golden Age" of sports, was produced by Samuel Goldwyn the year after Gehrig's tragic death. Baseball immortal Babe Ruth portrays himself, and the cast also includes Yankee catcher Bill Dickey and sportscaster Bill Stern.

The picture—which won an Academy Award for film editing—received Oscar nominations in 10 other categories: best picture, original story (Paul Gallico), screenplay (Herman J. Manckiewicz and Jo Swerling), actor (Gary Cooper), actress (Teresa Wright), cinematography (Rudolph Maté), music scoring (Leigh Harline), special effects, art direction and set decoration, and sound.

Discover Diet Delight: a delightful way to diet.

Only the calories nature put in.

Nature knows best. We believe it. So we pack Diet Delight canned fruits in a very special way — without sugar. Result: Diet Delight has only the calories nature put in. Exactly the same number of calories as fresh fruit. About half the calories you get in the regular kind of canned fruit.

Diet Delight has more of the true fruit flavor.

When you take the pick of the California crop and pack it with our special process you just naturally get more of the true fruit flavor. That's why we say Diet Delight low-calorie canned fruits honestly taste better than any other kind you can buy. Try Diet Delight juicy sliced peaches. Or refreshingly sweet Bartlett pears. Or sunny fruit cocktail. Try the whole line of Diet Delight low-calorie canned fruits.

We'll give you $1.00 to discover Diet Delight.

Here's all you do: Buy any four Diet Delight canned fruits. After you've enjoyed them, simply remove the label from each can. On the back of one label tell us, in 25 words or less, why you like Diet Delight. Mail the four labels, together with the coupon, to Diet Delight. We'll send you $1.00.

'FREE AT LAST'

"I am an outcast from the society of my childhood and an outlaw in the land of my birth."

—Frederick Douglass

Actor Ossie Davis describes the experiences of the Negro from Reconstruction to World War II—a time that saw the promise of Emancipation degenerate as the U.S. entered the dark ages of racism.

The subtle and debilitating changes that evolved during this period are dramatized through the words of four outstanding Negro leaders: Frederick Douglass, former slave, leading abolitionist and representative of the U.S. Government in Haiti; Booker T. Washington, founder of Alabama's Tuskegee Institute and advisor to several Presidents; W. E. B. DuBois, militant spokesman for Negro rights and an NAACP founder; and Marcus Garvey, the fiery Jamaican who claimed four million followers for his African nationalist movement.

W. E. B. DuBois

Booker T. Washington

Script by Arthur Rabin and James Benjamin.

DAYDREAMS OF

EXTRA CASH

He may picture himself as an Indian ($36.81) bartender (up to $72.67) on horseback ($35.38) or . . .

By Joseph Finnigan

A member of the Screen Extras Guild who roller-skates to the studio not only saves bus fare—he can earn two extra dollars a day. The only catch is, the extra must be asked to bring his skates to the studio and use them in a scene. He just can't roll blissfully by the studio gatekeeper, wave, shout a friendly "hello" and expect premium pay.

It's all spelled out very carefully, along with rates for sitting on a camel, holding a polo stick, catching a pie in the face, and other accomplishments of the well-trained extra, in the SEG contract with film producers.

This contract is not only a legal document, 44 pages long and filled with clauses and subclauses, it has all the elements of a Mack Sennett routine, down to the last bathing beauty. There's a clause (or subclause) for nearly everything that would mean extra pay for an extra, plus a clause (or subclause) to cover anything the contract doesn't cover.

Behind it stands the imposing image of the Federal Government's august National Labor Relations Board, ever ready to step in on behalf of any extra who wasn't paid his $9.50 bonus for whooping it up like an Indian.

To begin with, SEG's approximately 4000 members are paid $27.31 a day for such "atmosphere" acting roles as walking down a street, portraying a prone accident victim or sitting in a bar. But our roller-skater gets an additional $2 a day if a director orders him to bring his skates to work and take a few fast turns around the set. If he falls down, the extra might get even more money, $45.36 additional if the tumble is vital to the scene.

Where most unions would shrug off golf, tennis, bowling and other sports as something performed after working hours, SEG looks upon such pursuits as a demand for increased pay if performed in a movie studio. Regardless of his ability, an extra can earn $41.59 a day playing football. The same is true of basketball or baseball players. Bowlers don't rate. They get only the standard $27.31.

Sports which call for an extra to team up with an animal are among the choicest of assignments. They're a lot less tiring and the pay is better. An extra who portrays a jockey, for instance, earns $66.45 a day for competing in a race that everybody knows is fixed. (The going rate for real jockeys, men eligible to ride in the Kentucky Derby, can be as little as $25 per race.) Should the extra only sit on his race horse, the animal being held by a groom, the salary is $35.38 a day.

Polo is another sport which an extra would prefer to play on company time. It pays $66.45 a day for extras who come somewhere close to hitting the ball. Even those who wouldn't care to try are paid $35.38 a day for being "mounted on a polo pony, stick in hand."

Camel and elephant riding are also soft jobs if the extra doesn't mind being jostled about a bit. Atop either animal, he earns $66.45 a day. No real camel driver has had it so good since Lyndon Johnson invited one to visit the White House.

Hollywood scripts sometimes require that somebody be tossed into a swimming pool at a party. The labor-management planning that goes into such a splash rivals summit-meeting preparations.

"An extra player required to get wet," says the contract, shall receive a "wet adjustment" of $5.50 per day. . . . "He may refuse to get wet unless such wet adjustment is previously agreed upon," SEG says. The contract neglects to specify who is supposed to provide the towels.

Another contract stipulation: "Swimmers cannot be required to go in the water within 30 minutes following a meal." So anxious continued are they to return to work, the extras appear to be swimming against the tide of good advice. The Red Cross suggests a delay of 60 to 90 minutes between eating and swimming.

Extras also are protected from dictatorial directors who order them to perform hazardous duties. Take the case of a timid extra, suddenly asked to run before a stampede of horses. If he's got any sense, he'll grab the contract, wave it in the director's face and stalk off the set. His contract spells everything out in black and white. It says, "An Extra will not be discriminated against for refusing to accept hazardous work." Stuntmen—who also have a detailed contract—do the tough stuff for much fancier fees than extras draw.

SEG has one weird clause which extras look upon as the gravy train, the best method of getting their single day's salary hiked. It's the "silent bit" section of the agreement—a limbo area of dramatic arts somewhere between "atmosphere" and saying lines.

"Silent bits," the pact says, occur "where an Extra player is directed to and does satisfactorily rehearse or perform pantomime of such significance that it portrays a point essential to the staging of the scene involved . . ."

That Extra-ese, translated, means that the extra will get $72.67 a day in such event.

Take the example of a bartender in a scene. Extras tending bar get the standard $27.31, which is exactly $6.56 more than a real bartender is paid. However, if our bartender must slip a mickey finn into the leading lady's drink, two things happen. She hits the floor and his "silent bit" earns him $72.67. His mickey and her collapse qualify as "an essential story point in pantomime."

Another increased stipend for extras comes when horse-opera producers run short of Indians. In no time at all, SEG Indians will come whooping and hollering over to the set, some of them white men painted red. There's a slight extra charge. The contract says an extra who has "body makeup or oil applied to more than 50 percent of his body" gets an additional $9.50.

Strictly adhered to, that clause could give an ersatz Indian more salary than a real one who didn't need to be painted red. However, SEG doesn't think it could happen. The Indians wouldn't stand for it.

Everything considered, the extra can make a fair salary—when he works. However, he will never grow rich. Of the 4239 registered extras in 1964, only 299 made more than $5000, according to Central Casting Corp., which hires players for the studios. Most extras rely on other income.

There must be occasions when an extra dreams of being asked to bring his skates to work, fall into a pool, paint himself red and portray a mickey-finning bartender—all in one day. His salary would be a tidy $89.67, not counting overtime, which could be considerable. And he would resemble a washed out, roller-skating Indian bartender.

Then, if he worked after midnight, dinner would be on the producer.

Delicious on the rocks or any way you mix it.

PLAIN CHOCOLATE CANDIES

EASY PARTY COOKIE RECIPE

- 1 cup shortening
- 1 cup brown sugar
- ½ cup granulated sugar
- 2 teaspoons vanilla
- 2 eggs
- 2½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon soda
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1½ cups m&m's® Plain
Chocolate Candies

Blend shortening and sugars. Beat in vanilla and eggs. Sift remaining dry ingredients together; add to the sugar and egg mixture. Mix well. Stir in ½ cup m&m's Plain Chocolate Candies — reserve remaining candies for decorating. Drop from teaspoon onto ungreased cookie sheet — decorate tops of cookies with remaining m&m's Plain Chocolate Candies as desired.

Bake at 375° for 10-12 mins., until golden brown.

After baking, some of the candies may be slightly cracked. This adds texture and interest to your cookies — still the same delightful flavor. Makes about 6 dozen 2½-inch cookies.

Never a chocolate mess, because the milk chocolate melts in your mouth — not in your hand!

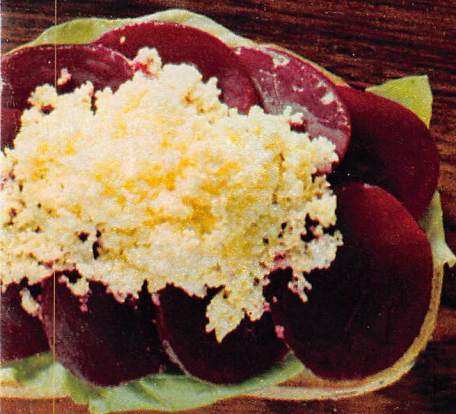

AN OPEN INVITATION:

TRY DANISH SANDWICHES

TURN PAGE FOR RECIPES

It's the custom of the Danes to omit the top slice of bread in a sandwich. The beauty of a sandwich filling, artistically arranged, attracts the eye and stimulates the appetite. If prepared in advance, wrap carefully to prevent drying, and store in the refrigerator. Serve with a knife and fork. Each recipe is designed to serve four persons.

1. BEET AND EGG SANDWICH—Spread 4 slices rye bread with butter. Top with 4 lettuce leaves. Top with 1 can (8 ounces) drained sliced beets. Sieve 2 hard-cooked eggs and spoon on. Sprinkle salt and white pepper.
2. HERRING SANDWICH—Spread 4 slices rye bread with butter. Drain 1 jar (14 ounces) rollmops herring. Unroll herring and cut into cubes, removing tails. Chop pickle inside herring and sprinkle on bread. Cover bread with cubes of herring. Sprinkle with chopped pimiento and garnish with thin slices of sweet pickle.
3. SHRIMP SANDWICH—Spread 4 slices rye bread with butter, and top with 4 lettuce leaves. Drain 2 jars (2¾ ounces each) tiny shrimp. Arrange shrimp in rows on lettuce. Sprinkle shrimp with lemon or lime juice and garnish with onion rings and a sprig of fresh dill.
4. CHICKEN-CRAB SANDWICH—Spread 4 slices of thin sliced pumpernickel with butter. Mix 2 cans (4¾ ounces each) chicken spread with ½ teaspoon crumbled poultry seasoning and 2 teaspoons lemon juice. Spread mixture on bread. Top with small lettuce leaves and garnish with 1 package (6 ounces) frozen king crab meat, defrosted and drained. Push pecan halves into chicken spread at corners of sandwich.
5. HAM AND ASPARAGUS SANDWICH—Spread 4 slices of thin sliced pumpernickel with butter or commercial sandwich spread. Wrap a boiled ham slice around 2 cooked asparagus spears and place each roll diagonally across slice of bread. Garnish with thin strips of pimiento. Cut 4 gherkins into thin lengthwise slices and place in one corner. Cut 3 tiny radish roses and place in the other corner with a tiny sprig of water cress.
6. APPLE-SLAW SANDWICH—Spread 4 slices of thin-sliced pumpernickel with commercial tartar sauce. Drain 1 can (1 pound, 1 ounce) sliced apples and put slices on top of bread. Shred green cabbage until you have 1⅓ cups. Top apples with cabbage and remaining apple slices. Sprinkle with French dressing. Put small pieces of crisp bacon on sandwich. Top with a mound of tartar sauce, twist of lemon and bits of bacon.

'AS UNREHEARSED AS A HICCOUGH'

That's brash Joe Pyne's fist-in-the-mouth show, which has rocked Los Angeles on its heels

A boy scout is courteous, kind, reverent and nine other kinds of nice things. And grows up to become a scoutmaster.

Joe Pyne is rude and rough, gratuitously cruel, blunt and brash. He is an ex-Marine who has never forgotten his barracks manners. He is never courteous, kind or reverent; and consequently he rides around in a Rolls-Royce, owns an airplane, and otherwise lives the rich and rewarding life.

Because of his nimble mind and his needling tongue, Pyne is the pride of KTTV, Los Angeles, late every Saturday night. The Joe Pyne Show—take cover—will soon be distributed nationally; his similar radio show now goes to 75 stations in the United States and Canada.

"This is a fist-in-the-mouth as opposed to a tongue-in-the-cheek show," Joe says. "My guests know they are going to be in a fight."

As might be expected, it is difficult to get people of substance to appear. But a parlous parade of racists, Ku Klux Klanners, Communists, wide-eyed "economic planners," and plain and fancy kooks show up weekly for verbal flagellation. When Pyne runs out of insults or inanities, his studio audience takes over. There is also a telephone hookup which allows the outside audience to add its two-bits' worth. Toward the end of the evening, the program livens up with "adult" material. The unspoken premise seems to be "as dirty as possible."

The show is an effective showcase for offbeat books. Lee Francis, once a Los Angeles madam, sold 50,000 copies of her book in three days after appearing on the air with Pyne.

Predictably, the show is extremely popular. Pyne's ratings have gone up steadily week after ugly week. "Only the blockbuster movies top us," Pyne's producer says.

Very often viewers call or write: "Why do you take such a rude tack?" "Because this tack keeps us in business," Joe replies.

Later Joe said, "All the other interview shows pull their punches and they don't last long. I've been doing controversial shows for 15 of my 19 years in the business."

Pyne's position as an interviewer is unassailable because he is always on the right side. He hates Nazis, racists, Black Muslims, Communists, Red China. He is for Morality, the Flag and Motherhood. People who disagree obviously are wrong.

But he can go too far. During the height of the Los Angeles riots, he presented a militant Negro. At one point, Pyne remarked that he would know what to do if threatened by rioters. Then he opened his desk drawer and displayed a revolver. The guest then pulled back his coat and showed that he, too, had a gun.

Modified pandemonium! The Negro was arrested as he left the studio for possession of a concealed weapon. He was not booked, however: He explained he was a salesman of fake jewelry and his gun was a cap pistol.

Joe Pyne's fate was direr. He was suspended by the station—according to one executive. According to another, "He was allowed to take a week's leave."

"It is my considered opinion that the world is going to hell," Pyne says darkly. "One night I held up a topless bathing suit. 'What are they trying to do?' I asked. 'This was designed by a man who hates women. Men who design clothes for women almost invariably hate women.'

"I promised to have a live model in a topless bathing suit the next week. I did, too. I got a little monkey and dressed him in a diaper."

Joe defends his "hard-nosed interviews." "It's kind of a town hall," he says.

"Actually, one important aspect of the show is an attempt to expose people who need to be exposed.

"We had George Lincoln Rockwell, an American Nazi, on the show. There is nothing lower than a Nazi, particularly an American Nazi. I think we did some good by holding him up to ridicule and showing him for what he is. I told him he was trying to make a fortune from hate."

Mrs. Marguerite Oswald, Lee Harvey Oswald's mother, appeared on the Pyne show for reasons best known to herself. "She is a grandmotherly type and it's awfully hard to charge into a woman like that," Pyne said. "I had no desire to rap her. But people called in and said some dreadful things. She started to cry. That's the only time I feel helpless—when they start to cry."

Pyne is a remarkable impromptu interviewer. He reads a great deal but makes no real preparations for the show.

"It's the only live show on the air where no one knows what's going to happen," he says. "It's as unrehearsed as a hiccup. I do no thinking in advance." continued

One delightful impromptu moment came when a guest hit Ozzie Whiffletree, then Pyne's side-kick, on the nose. On camera. The fist in the face was in response to a typical Whiffletree blast: "You're a liar, that's what you are, and a coward, too."

The ungrammatical ranting of Whiffletree—"Put your false teeth in backwards and bite your throat"—"Thank you very large"—"I'm aggravated all a time—I wear cheap shoes and tight shorts"—made Joe Pyne look almost angelic.

Whiffletree, actually Ozzie Curtis, a wealthy Los Angeles businessman, no longer is on the show.

Pyne, hammering hard at his guests, sometimes gets them so rattled they blurt out secrets. One man confessed to a record as a peeping Tom; another was arrested on camera. The Beverly Hills cops had been looking for him for more than a year.

Joe Pyne does not meet his guests before the show. "And after the show, usually they don't want to meet me," Joe grins.

'We want emotion'

His producer, Robert Hayward, picks them after studying their backgrounds. "I have two qualifications for a guest. They must be well-grounded in their subject and the subject must be visceral—we want emotion, not mental involvement."

Joe adds: "This is entertainment, not education. And sometimes the people get very good conversation." Off-stage, Joe seems almost gentle. He is 41 years and weighs 171 pounds, down from 188 after a few weeks on the drinking man's diet. "I get fat from air," he says ruefully. He walks with a limp because his left leg is artificial. Joe spent four years as a Marine in the Pacific and was wounded in the leg on Okinawa.

"Several years later a rare malignancy developed—synovioma. They said, 'Take it off or you'll have only two years to live.' So we took it off and I've lived 10 years so far."

When irate mothers call to berate Pyne for showing "dirty" material to their teen-agers, Pyne has a stern reply. "Look," he says, "I've got teen-agers of my own and I see that they are in bed before midnight. Get your kids to bed on time."

His teen-agers are Cathee, 17; and Edward Michael, 15. They live with Joe's first wife in Pennsylvania.

He planned to study law

After his service in the Marines, Joe planned to study law. He was handicapped by a severe stammer, however, and went to drama school to overcome it. Somewhere law was sidetracked. Pyne recorded his voice in a booth in a Philadelphia shooting gallery and sent it out to radio stations. A Lumberton, N.C., station hired him for $25 in 1946, and he has been broadcasting almost ever since.

"I quit the business in 1960 and put all my savings into a mobile home show," he says. "Then the Eisenhower recession came along and mobile home shows recessed more than anything else. So I went back to radio."

Joe had the highest rated radio show in Canada, he says, before heading for the West Coast. He flipped a coin: Heads, California; tails Florida.

California lost. Joe arrived in Los Angeles (he had done some TV work there previously) and this time went to work for ABC, before transferring to KLAC, where his snarling radio show quickly won top rating. In 1964, Joe went back on television and has a contract for 52 weeks. Under new arrangements, his program will be syndicated nationally. Then viewers across the country will be able to join Pyne's crusade against the creeps of the world.

NOW SHE'S
THE FUR-BEARING ANIMAL

June Lockhart has moved many light years away from Lassie and those gingham frocks

Turn page for story by Melvin Durslag

As a child growing up in New York and Los Angeles, June Lockhart had no special affinity for animals. Her father, the late actor Gene Lockhart, kept a pooch to which June was kind but generally indifferent, and at no time could she be persuaded to lead a charge, say, for a bigger and better canine world.

How she gravitated to a television dog show is largely the fault of a boulevard stop in Beverly Hills. And today, as you reflect on her six years in Lassie, in which she always seemed to be calling, "Be back in time for supper!" you find it less than surprising that she should be fleeing in something traveling 70,000 miles an hour.

As heroine of the new CBS series Lost in Space, she has traded her gingham gown and her apron for a form-fitting silver lamé jump suit. She is a biochemist, married to an astrophysicist (Guy Williams), and the two make beautiful experiments together, far from the madding kennel.

Why she signed with 'Lassie'

How June first got lost in the dog latitudes is a short story.

"I had rejected the part of the mother in the Lassie series," she recalls. "That is, not Lassie's mother, but the mother of the little boy who followed the dog around. Well, I had drawn up to this boulevard stop in Beverly Hills a short time later. A car pulled up alongside me. In it was Bob Golden, the producer of the Lassie show. Bob called to me, 'Hey, June, I wish you'd do that mother for me!' I yelled back, 'I might for a year.' He answered, 'That's not long enough.' And he drove away."

When Miss Lockhart got home she sat down for a moment of introspection. "I never had a frantic ambition to be big as an actress," she says. "I always regarded the business as a lovely hobby and a way to make money. The Lassie series, I said to myself, offered dignity, prestige, steady work and good pay. What more could someone like me ask? I had my agent call Bob, and we made a deal."

Thus June embarked upon life on the farm, where, as Ruth Martin, American Mother, she sat in the bull pen while a dog pitched. As a sex vehicle the series could not have threatened Peyton Place; in six years she kissed her TV husband twice—both times on the cheek.

"We were seen in the bedroom only once," she recalls, almost wistfully. "And, at that, we had twin beds."

Some of the implications

Nor was the show without implications as far as Miss Lockhart's personal life was concerned.

"My contract stated specifically," she says, "that I was to conduct myself in a way consistent with the general character of a young American housewife living on a small farm. I was forbidden to endorse alcoholic beverages, deodorants, laxatives, depilatories and feminine hygienics. Nor could I play a sophisticated woman of the world who, by prevailing mores of our society, could be considered immoral or undesirable."

While doing the Lassie series, June was offered a guest part in another show in which she would portray a widow who had murdered her son and run over her dog. Even though the dog wasn't a collie, she was denied permission to take the role. She also was rejected in her request for a part in which she was to stagger to the ladies' room and ask one of the occupants for a dime in order to telephone Alcoholics Anonymous.

Unwittingly, a magazine writer once got Miss Lockhart into a jam with her Lassie sponsors. In a profile he mentioned casually that she nursed a Scotch and water during the interview.

"When this appeared in print," she says, "all hell broke loose. A special meeting was called at the studio. There must have been 9 or 10 executives in the room. Figuratively, I was led into the room in chains. I was informed that the image and concept of my character in Lassie was harmed. The subject was belabored. Finally, I got mad and said, 'OK, so I blew it. I made a mistake of sipping a drink in front of a writer. Haven't you ever made a mistake?'"

"Bob Golden felt sorry for me. 'Look, gentlemen,' he said, 'we've spoken our piece. Don't you think we're now beating a dead horse?'"

The matter was dropped, but Miss Lockhart made a distinct point thereafter of requesting interviewers to refrain from writing that she drank an occasional highball.

It eventually transpired in the Lassie script that the dog went to live with a forest ranger, and Ruth Martin's homemaking was no longer required.

"The series was good to me," says June in retrospect, "but they couldn't have found an actress more alien, personally, to the part."

Wed to an architect

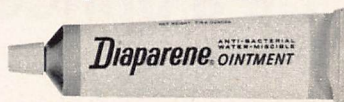

Married to John Lindsay, a prosperous architect, June and her mate reside in a 15-room Elizabethan home in the Los Angeles suburb of Brentwood. The powder room is unique, in that it serves as the portrait gallery of the Lindsays and the Lockharts, dating back several generations. And reposing in a neat frame on the wall behind the commode are the 41 merit badges earned by Mr. Lindsay, an Eagle Scout.

can couple, June and John enjoy going down to the corner to shoot a game of pool. Sometimes they drive in a 1923 fire engine that June owns, complete with power steering.

The Lindsays were married six years ago by a rabbi, even though she is a Catholic and he is a Congregationalist. And why did they choose this clergyman? He happened to be a friend of their host in San Francisco, where they decided to be wed.

Purchased in 1959 from Dore Schary, the Lindsay home contains the customary ornaments and bric-a-brac complementing the Elizabethan decor . . . fire nozzles, helmets from the German Imperial Army, taxi horns, elephant guns, tire jacks. The occupants haven't gotten around to furnishing all the rooms. June recently completed the den by covering the couch with a red throw-rug purchased at Sears, Roebuck for $32. Currently, she says, she is in the market for a callopie.

Basically academic, with an insatiable curiosity, Miss Lockhart divides herself among a wide variety of pastimes. Her bedside readers, for instance, are mostly medical textbooks. She has a keen interest in gold mining, collects Victorian antiques, studies lighter-than-air aircraft, offers Hanukkah readings at the dinner table and looks for bargains in used dresses.

A bargain in chiffon

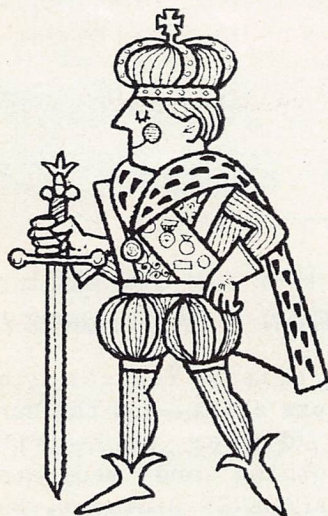

At a dinner party one night in San Francisco, her eye came to rest on a fully beaded, chiffon gown—a Paris original—worn by a local society matron.

"She was a lovely lady who embraced the theory that when a woman is successful in a dress, she should never wear it again," says June. "My theory is just the opposite. If I'm successful in a dress, I wear it until it drops. I've worn some dresses 12 years.

"Well, I asked this lady if she would like to sell me her chiffon gown—not on the spot, mind you, but, say, the next day. She agreed. And I bought a $1495 dress for 600 bucks."

Actually, this is more than June is in the habit of paying for garments. Most of the time she buys her evening dresses from a secondhand place in Santa Monica. "Not long ago," she confides, "I got a Balenciaga, originally owned by Irene Dunne, for $30."

What Miss Lockhart wears in Lost in Space isn't likely to be included in the wardrobe of Miss Dunne, but at least it gets June away from the farm frocks of Lassie and she finds her footwear—silver boots continued

New Lotion discovery helps relieve arthritis misery.

Science formulates fast-working, smooth-flowing white lotion for hours of relief from pain.

At this moment, a new product called Ben-Gay[®] Penetrating Heat Lotion is bringing hours of blessed relief to sufferers from the minor pains of arthritis and rheumatism. Penetrating Heat Lotion is the first analgesic rub of its kind in lotion form. And because it's a lotion, you can pour on the relief when you need it.

Soon after you smooth it on, Ben-Gay Penetrating Heat Lotion helps alleviate your pain with comforting warmth that goes deep down to your painful joints. Even if you take aspirin or a prescription drug, new Ben-Gay Penetrating Heat Lotion is something more you can do for your arthritis pain. Now you can pour on the relief when you need it with this new lotion discovery.

—a considerable improvement over what she calls “the Mrs. K. shoes” she wore in the previous series.

Commissioned by the Government to colonize a planet in the Alpha Centauri solar system, the space couple and their three children zoom off into the wild blue yonder. The year is 1997 and Earth is so crowded, what with the Chinese population explosion and the like, that new living areas must be pioneered. Toward this end, Uncle Sam has pumped $40 billion into the Alpha Centauri project.

The only trouble is that the spaceship bearing June and her family bows a tendon en route and they wind up in mysterious places where one-eyed monsters and other denizens lurk. Repeatedly, you look for Lassie to come to the rescue, but not a bark is heard. Each episode ends with someone clinging from a precipice, prompting Miss Lockhart, whose space name is Maureen Robinson, to observe, “You might call this thing the ‘Perils of Maureen.’”

$350,000 in sets

Lost in Space, filmed at 20th Century-Fox, is the creation of Irwin Allen, who contends that the elaborate sets, costing $350,000, are the most expensive of any for a television series. “In other words,” says Allen, “if this show doesn’t stay on the air three years, everyone is bankrupt.”

The prospect of all that time in outer space doesn’t frighten Miss Lockhart, who insists that she is emotionally geared to a long series and functions better with a regulated daily routine than on a catch-as-catch-can basis.

“I’m one of those organized types,” she says. “I do all the bookkeeping in our house. I take care of the insurance and the plumbing, buy the postage stamps, drive our two daughters to the dentist, plan candlelight dinners and feed the goldfish and the cats. I get mad at actors who gripe about series. I ask them, ‘What were you doing before you landed in a series?’ Every actor should only be so lucky as to have a nice, steady job.”

“And what about Lassie?” she was asked.

“I would still be in it if the dog hadn’t left town and I hadn’t been written out,” she says. “I was restricted by the show in many ways, both on camera and off camera, but I didn’t walk out.”

It is a fact, though, that in June’s first part after leaving Lassie—she played an elegant lady attired in a full-length mink in a Perry Mason show—she made a significant announcement at rehearsal. Huddling snugly within the coat, she said, “From now on, I’m going to be the fur-bearing animal.”

Super Anahist Decongestant Tablets have over 8 times more cold-relief medication

than the leading cold capsule

Actual Quantitative Measurement of Relief-Giving Ingredients

The chart on the left shows the big difference between Super Anahist and today's leading cold capsule. An actual dosage-for-dosage measurement, the chart shows Super Anahist gives you over 8 times more relief medication! Why?

Though both formulas contain antihistamine and decongestant, Super Anahist adds a stimulant, 2 analgesics, and Vitamin C—all missing from the capsule. Thus, Super Anahist relieves nasal-sinus congestion, plus your cold's headache, fever and muscular pains as the capsule cannot do.

Gives you more medication in the first 12 minutes

than the leading capsule does in 12 hours

Instead of working pellet by pellet, Super Anahist dissolves in minutes... for relief up to 4 hours. You get a sunburst of medication for fast relief! For over 8 times more cold-relief medication in every dosage, get Super Anahist Decongestant Tablets.
